On May 13, 1994, the Marine Employees' Commission entered its decision in the above entitled case, finding the complaint did not indicate a violation of protected rights pursuant to RCW 47.64.130 if later found to be true and provable. The complaint appears to be a grievance and should have been resolved under the terms of the parties' collective bargaining agreement. The matter was dismissed without prejudice.

On May 26, 1994, counsel for the Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific filed a Motion for Reconsideration. We have carefully reviewed the motion. The Commission made its decision on the allegations of breach of contract information before it at the time. If the allegations include an alleged breach of protected rights, the IBU is free to file a new complaint.

Pursuant to RCW 47.64.280, Decision No. 118-MEC is final and binding.

The motion for reconsideration is denied.

DONE this 6th day of July 1994.
